

Workshops, talks, EAP-style support, and clinic collaboration around pressure, burnout, emotional wellbeing, and workplace stress.

A grounded psychological approach to pressure and wellbeing

My work focuses on people and teams carrying pressure, emotional overwhelm, burnout risk, and professional responsibility. The approach is psychological, practical, and connected to the realities of modern work and life.

For clinics External collaboration, referrals, workshops, psychoeducation, and support for clients whose difficulties are connected to stress, work pressure, adjustment, identity, or emotional overload.	For organizations Workshops, talks, EAP-style support, and wellbeing sessions for teams, leaders, founders, and employees working in demanding environments.
For communities Accessible sessions for coworking communities, universities, founder groups, and international professionals navigating pressure and change.	For individuals Psychological support for stress, emotional overwhelm, relationships, identity, transitions, burnout risk, and work-related pressure.

Workshop topics

Burnout before burnout happens Recognizing emotional exhaustion, stress patterns, and early warning signs before people collapse.	Emotional regulation under pressure How stress affects thinking, reactions, communication, and decision-making.
Workplace wellbeing for real teams Pressure, boundaries, psychological safety, and healthier work cultures.	Leadership pressure and emotional load Support for founders, managers, and team leads carrying responsibility for people and decisions.
Communication under stress How pressure changes conversations, conflict, trust, and emotional safety in groups.	Psychological sustainability Work patterns that support performance without disconnecting from wellbeing.

Professional foundation

Background: psychological counseling experience, five years in suicide prevention initiatives, public mental health work, and more than five years in international corporate environments.

Public work: media appearances, interviews, panels, public mental health discussions, and participation in initiatives connected to psychological support and mental health awareness.

Research: PhD research in psychology focused on wellbeing, burnout, inclusion, leadership, and work.

Languages: English, Spanish, Serbian, and conversational Italian where appropriate.

Collaboration formats

One-off workshop A practical session for a specific group, clinic audience, company, or community.	Workshop series A structured series around stress, burnout prevention, emotional regulation, or workplace wellbeing.
EAP-style support Individual or group support for employees or members, scoped according to the organization’s needs.	Clinic collaboration Referral collaboration, external provider arrangement, room-based collaboration, or psychoeducational sessions.
Speaking Talks and public discussions on emotional wellbeing, psychological pressure, burnout, and mental health awareness.	Tailored program A format designed around context, audience, needs, duration, and delivery setting.

Contact: info@aleksandarplavsic.com | +34 604 383 935 | aleksandarplavsic.com